

I've provided regional terms for peanut here for you. However, when in doubt, use the southern version, which will be acceptable since you're foreign.

PEANUT

North Vietnam (for example, Hanoi)

đậu lạc = “dough lack”

--> Note that “đậu” refers to any sort of legume

Central and South Vietnam (for example, Hue and Saigon)

đậu phộng = “dough fung”

Note that this “đ” is like the regular English “d” that has a hard sound to it.

PEANUT OIL

North Vietnam

dầu đậu lạc = “zow dough lack”

Central and South Vietnam

dầu đậu phộng = “yow dough fung”

Note that the “đ” is pronounced like a “z” in the north and more like a “y” in the south. In general, “dầu” means oil.

DOES THIS DISH HAVE PEANUTS?

Món này có đậu phộng [đậu lạc] không? = “Mon nay kaw dough fung [dough lack] kohng?”

I DON'T EAT PEANUTS

Tôi không ăn đậu phộng [đậu lạc] = “Toy kohng ahn dough fung [dough lack]”
